

Governor Gives Creeper Support

There are still no new, definite reports on the progress toward getting Legislative support for the State buying out The Heber Creeper. However, a letter from Gov. Norm Bangerter, dated Dec. 29, has been made public by the Heber Valley Chamber of Commerce, assuring his own support.

The letter was written before the Jan. 3 public hearing where hundreds of Wasatch County citizens and officials, as well as people from outside the County, turned out to plead for the State to invest money to save the historic railroad. So it can be assumed that the Governor's support is even stronger now.

In his letter, addressed to the Heber Valley Chamber of Commerce, the Governor said the State Director of Transportation, Eugene Findlay, was chairman of a task force formed to study and make recommendations on the alternatives for saving The Creeper.

He said the task force "has spent considerable time and effort on the project, strong support has been forthcoming from our State Historical Society and from the Utah Department of Transportation, as well as this [the Governor's] office. It should also be clear to you that the strongest support should be coming from Wasatch County (and, indeed, your Commissioners are very supportive) and from those legislators who represent the Wasatch County."

Following the hearing, Doug Bischoff, who represents the Governor, enthusiastically said he would take a positive report back to the Governor on the community support that he was looking for. The legislators have also expressed determination to appropriate the money necessary to purchase the train, now that they know their constituents are behind them.

to kill non-game fish next August, then restocked, he expects ice fishing to draw even greater crowds.

He said the State will groom a new snowmobile trail from the Forest Service Complex in the Strawberry Valley south to Soldier Summit. Another will go north into Currant Creek, then divide into two trails, one of which will go down Lake Creek into Heber City. The other will go through Mill Hollow and Kamas, then emerge at the Mirror Lake Highway.

"People will be able to go from Mountain View, WY to Soldier Summit," he said.

According to the Utah Snowmobile Association, snowmobiling in the Strawberry Valley is the best in the western states, he reported, because there is good snow, there are lot of wide, open areas, and there are a lot of different types of scenery and terrain.

For instance, "They can go up through the trees, get up on the ridge, and see Mt. Timpanogos and Provo Peak, and look out over Strawberry Valley. It's a fantastic view," he said.

There are also a lot of possibilities for developing cross-country ski trails, which he expects people to become more acquainted with.

Last winter, dog-sledders raced around a seven-mile course, which was ideal terrain for the competitors as well as spectators, who could see the racers along most of the track. Jensen said now that the Forest Service has the additional acreage it acquired from the Strawberry Water Users, the track can be expanded to as long as 20 miles, much of which will still be in view for spectators.

Many of last Saturday's visitors also toured the new Forest Service Visitors Center, where there are maps showing the recreational facilities available, displays of educational information about the fisheries, and a map explaining the Central Utah Water Project. There is also a relief map of the Strawberry Valley, showing the locations of campgrounds, picnic areas, parking lots, launching facilities, fishing access points, restrooms, food service, gas pumps, and viewing areas.

Jensen said a computer video game is also being designed for the center, featuring both moving and still pictures of Strawberry.

"A person playing the video game will actually be able to see how he'd like to manage this land out here," he said. "We need to know how people feel about how the land ought to be managed."

He said all the input will be considered, although everybody's ideas won't necessarily be incorporated. He emphasized that since it is all public land, people should be made aware that it belongs to them.

"We're professional land managers, but the public is still our boss," he said. "And as they get involved with it, I think they'll want to take care of it better. We want people to come in here and go away from here feeling that this is a very special place that they've been to in the Uintah National Forest, and that they've had a fun and exciting experience, and maybe learned a little bit."

There will be another computer system that will be tied into a recreation opportunity guide that will provide information about all public lands, recreational facilities, and hotel and motels throughout the state. Jensen said his department plans to work with the Heber Valley Chamber of Commerce to put a similar system in the Chamber's new Heber City Heritage Hall and Visitors Center, describing what is available and what there is to do in Wasatch County. He called it "one of the best marketing tools around."

"There will be moving video to show what it's like to go snowmobiling in the Heber Valley or Strawberry Valley; or what it's like to go horseback riding in the Heber Valley; or what it's like to go bicycling in the Uintah National Forest; and what opportunities are available at The Homestead and on The Heber Creeper, and throughout the whole state."

A boardwalk connects the Forest Service Visitors Center with the Division of Wildlife Resources fish trap, about 100 yards away, where there are exhibits explaining the fish trapping process, fish reproduction and spawning, and the division's hatchery program. Visitors will also be able to watch the trapping process.

Eventually there will also be a walk-in aquarium, where visitors will be able to view fish in their natural environment, similar to the one at Hogle Zoo, Jensen said.

Sound Investment Out To Capture Hearts

A. Z. Smith, an electrician, will be in Heber some time this week to investigate the feasibility of putting an electric light wire from the Ontario tunnel plant on this place. We need electric lights and would be pleased to see the scheme put through or a plant put in nearer home. Think the matter over and be prepared to talk business when Mr. Smith arrives.
